BCA HISTORY

The Blackridge Civic Association has its roots in a time honored American Tradition: a mini-tax revolt.

By 1944, the new community of Blackridge was losing some of the rawness of its earliest years. Through the efforts of the five year old Garden Club, trees now lined the streets, work was ready to start on the corner plantings, and funds were raised for handsome new road markers. The years of hard work resulted in an attractive and prestigious residential community - leading to an unwelcome jolt of a substantial increase in property taxes.

The ladies of the Garden Club took action by circulating a petition claiming that tax penalties were being levied because of individual and collective improvements. When the petition produced no practical results, the civic committee of the Club called a meeting on Sunday afternoon in 1944 and invited their husbands to join in the effort to reduce the new assessments. That afternoon, the Blackridge Civic Association was launched and with it a new era in Blackridge history.

Today, the Blackridge Civic Association seeks to provide community identity for the neighborhood that now includes parts of Wilkinsburg, Churchill and Penn Hills.

The Civic Association built its Clubhouse through community support in 1953 and opened the swimming pool as an independent subsidiary in 1972. Property includes approximately ten acres of wooded land, ball fields, and a playground. A full social program for adults and children has evolved over the years along with the regular publication of a community newsletter.
